Learning Is A

Name Superior to Beauty

"Haec studia adulescentiam alunt, senectutem oblectant,
secundas res ornant,
adversis perfugium ac solacium praebent,
delectant domi, non impediunt foris, pernoctant nobiscum, peregrinantur, rusticantur."

These are the studies
which give strength to youth,
delight to old age;
"secundas res ornant,"
they add luster to times
of prosperity and security;
"adversis perfugium
ac solacium praebent," they give us a safe harbor and a little consolation
when times grow tough.
These are the studies
that Latin School nourishes and preserves.

No one who loves Boston should be left unaware of the place of the Boston Latin School
among the things that once made Boston
the Athens of America.

You have had
your pleasures here,
genuine, zestful,
and unforgettable.
You have had them
in your friendships,
your classrooms, your sports,
your extra-curricular activities,
in the pursuit
of your special interests, in the joy of feeling
both your minds and bodies grow.

Learning Is a Companion on a Journey to a Strange Country; Learning Is Strength Inexhaustible

But compare what you now know,
and more important still,
what you now want to know,
with what you knew
when you came here,
and you will get the measure
not only of your own growth
but of the excellence of the education which has made your growth possible.

Learning Is

Has it been exacting? Fortunately, yes.
Count its toughness an act of mercy.
The good things are not easily come by.

Acquired by Reading Books

There may be older schools
in other countries;
but almost always
they have suffered a complete change in spirit and have endured only by ceasing to be themselves.

But the Much More

In spite of all revolutions,
the Latin School, has kept the embers
of traditional learning alive,
at which the humblest rushlight might always be lighted, has kept the highway clear for every boy
to the professions of theology, law, medicine, and teaching,
and a window open to his mind
from these times to all other times and from this place
to all other places.

Necessary Learning,

The World's Knowledge,

No one who loves
the American public school system will lay a hand on this school, which was its cradle
and will remain a major norm of its excellence.

Is Only to be Acquired by Reading

No man who understands the meaning of education and of civilization,
no one who loves freedom, no one who loves faith will fail to be grateful to this school.

Most Reverend John J. Wright, D.D., '27
Bishop of Pittsburgh

DEDICATION

Latin School men have served our country in many ways.

*They have contributed greatly to build her industries,
to develop her culture,
to strengthen her faith,
to educate her young,
to heal her sick,
and to guide her on the road
of self-government.*

It is in part this heritage of outstanding service that inspires each Latin School student to prove himself worthy as a man to add his name to the illustrious list of Latin School graduates.

THOMAS VINCENT LEARSON: Corporation official. Born on September 26, 1912, he graduated from Boston Latin School in 1931 and received his A.B. from Harvard in 1935. While attending Latin, Mr. Learson was an exemplary student and scholar. During World War II, he served as an officer in the Navy.

Thomas Learson has been with the IBM Corporation since 1935. Some of the positions he has held include: Manager, Philadelphia office; district manager, Detroit headquarters; general sales manager; director electronic data processing machines; vice-president in charge of sales, New York City; and director, IBM World Trade Corporation.

It is a great tribute to this Latin School graduate that he has risen within such a short time to President of this world-wide corporation.

JOHN COLLINS WARREN: American surgeon. Born in 1778, he entered Latin School at the age of eight and went on to graduate from Harvard in 1797. He was adjunct professor of anatomy and surgery at Harvard in 1806-15, and professor in those branches in 1815-47. He was one of the founders of the Massachusetts General Hospital and was its chief surgeon the remainder of his life. He performed the first public operation in which ether was used as an anaesthesia in 1846; he also performed the first operation for strangulated hernia in this country. He was one of the founders of the American Medical Association, and president of the Massachusetts Medical Society.

Dr. Warren was a voluminous writer, drawing upon a vast fund of personal experience as a surgeon. He was greatly interested in palaeontology, and his collection of specimens formed the nucleus of the "Warren Museum" of the Harvard Medical School.

JOHN J. WRIGHT: bishop; born in Boston on July 18, 1909. He graduated from Boston Latin School in 1927 and received his A.B. from Boston College in 1931; S.T.L. Gregorian University in Rome, 1936; S.T.D., 1939. Many honorary degrees were conferred upon Bishop Wright including those from Boston College, Holy Cross, Layola, Fordham and St. John (Brooklyn). From 1939 to 1944 he was a professor at St. John's Seminary in Boston and became secretary to the Archbishop of Boston in 1943. He was the first bishop of Worcester, Mass. serving from 1950 to 1959. Since he has been bishop of Pittsburgh Diocese.

Bishop Wright has written many works on Catholic social teachings. He is presently Episcopal director of the Lay Retreat Movement in the United States, Officer Legion of Honor (France), and Order of Merit (Italy).

JOSEPH PATRICK KENNEDY: American financier and diplomat born in Boston on September 6, 1888. The son of a well-to-do politician and businessman, Kennedy graduated from Boston Latin School and Harvard College. He became president of the Columbia Trust Company in 1914. After the war he entered the motion picture industry and by 1928 had a controlling interest in Keith, Albee, Orpheum Theatres Corporation. By 1930, he had acquired a substantial fortune which he increased through investments in real estate to an estimated $250 million by 1957.

Long an outstanding Roman Catholic layman and a prominent member of the Democratic Party, Kennedy contributed greatly to Democratic campaign funds. He held several important posts under Democratic administrations, culminating in his appointment as ambassador to Great Britain (1937-1940).

To a Heritage

Charles W. Eliot

CHARLES W. ELIOT: U. S. educator and a leader in public affairs, he was born in Boston, Mass. on March 20, 1834. Graduating from Boston Latin School in 1849 and Harvard University in 1853, he taught mathematics and science at Harvard from 1854 to 1863. In 1865 he became professor of analytical chemistry at MIT. There he served until 1869, when he was appointed president of Harvard, which, when he retired in 1909, he had successfully elevated into an institution of world renown.

Contending that higher learning in the United States needed to be "broadened, deepened, and invigorated," Eliot demanded a place for the sciences along with the humanities in any sound program of liberal education.

Eliot's influence reached into secondary education too. During his presidency Harvard raised its entrance requirements, and some other major colleges did likewise. This in turn effected a corresponding rise in secondary school standards.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN: American conductor, composer, and pianist, born Lawrence, Massachusetts on August 25, 1918. He took up the study of piano when he was 10, graduated from Boston Latin School in 1935, and graduated from Harvard University in 1939. On November 13, 1943, he scored a spectacular triumph when, with less than 12 hours' notice and with no opportunity to rehearse the musicians, he substituted for Bruno Walter in leading the orchestra through a difficult program, earning the unqualified acclaim of the audience and the critics. Between 1945 and 1955 he led every major orchestra in the United States and western Europe and was everywhere conceded a place in the front rank of the world's conductors.

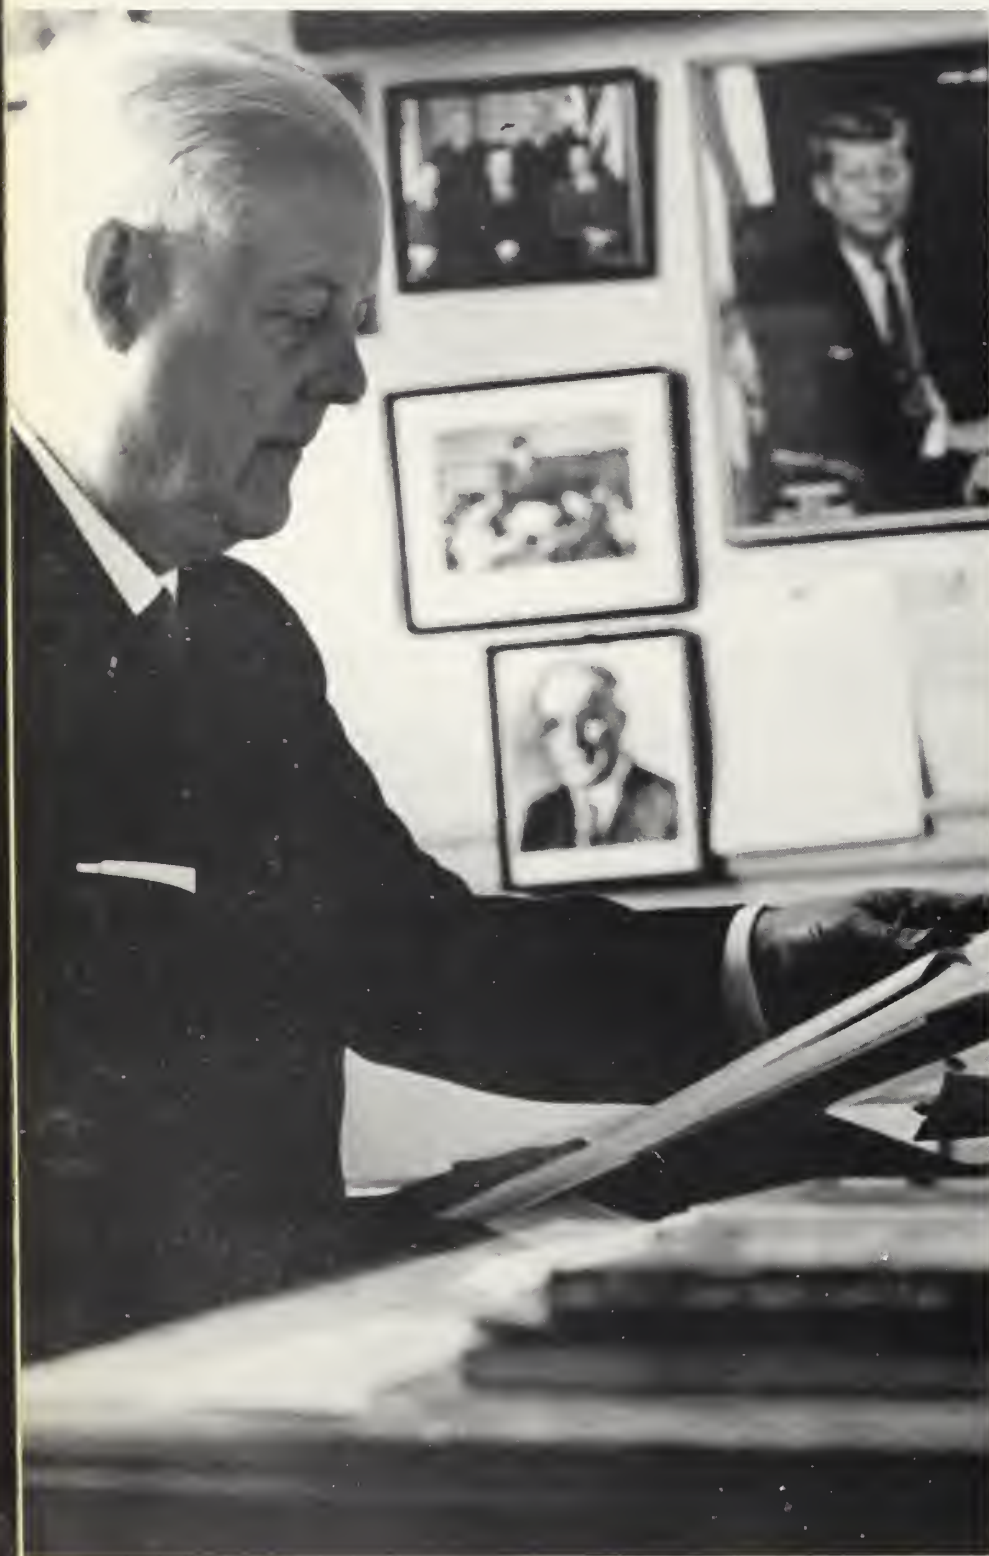

Especially gifted in the interpretation of contemporary music, Mr. Bernstein has also appeared frequently as a concert pianist. His own compositions include numerous works in the serious, popular, and jazz idioms.

Nicholas Murray Butler, late President of Columbia University, once said that "Education truly conceived is spiritual growth toward intellectual and moral perfection, and is not an artificial process to be carried on according to mechanical formulas to a purely material end." There are utilities higher and utilities lower, and if a school in its zeal to fit the youth for self-support were to neglect to lay the foundation for that higher intellectual and spiritual life which constitutes humanity's full stature, it would sacrifice the higher utilities to the lower.

Fortunately the Class of 1966, along with the legions of past graduates, has received a training in the Humanities based on "spiritual growth toward intellectual and moral perfection." Because of this education, you are fortified with knowledge and the know-why which will enable you to live the good life. Like the Latin School men of the past, you will be able to stand up and be counted upon to do your duty no matter the cost. Let the cause be just, you will be its defender, thereby inspiring those of lesser moral fiber. You will be leaders in our society of tomorrow, never forgetting the example of the host of leaders whose names adorned our hallowed hall. The latter excelled in many fields of endeavor but they all had one thing in common—a resolute determination to do their duty and excel in the area of talents with which their Creator so generously endowed them.

Plato tells us, "For a man to conquer himself is the first and best of all victories." The long hard road through the Latin School which you have traversed proves the Philosopher's statement. You have done this by acquiring SELF-DISCIPLINE the sine-qua-non for success in life. You have the Humanities to thank for that priceless virtue.

Be never unmindful of the debt you owe your Masters, parents, and the good people of the City of Boston who made it possible for you to enjoy the privilege of attending this venerable institution. Be loyal to BLS, aid her in every way, make her cause your cause. Make it a goal to help future Latin School boys to achieve a college education by being a generous donor to the Scholarship Funds.

Above all heed the admonition of Horace, "Aequam memento rebus in arduis servare mentem—"

A Message to the Class of 1966 . . .

Now, gentlemen, the victory is won, and as we prepare to leave the Latin School, we must take a look into the future — we must decide what is to be our destiny. Surely, whatever our decision, the road will be rough, but only as rough as we wish to make it. The obstacles with which we will have to cope will be great and seemingly impossible to overcome, but the training we have received here has prepared us to meet the challenges of reality.

It is true that at first the school seemed cold and cruel. As the years passed, however, we have come to realize that in truth she has been a fostering mother, by whose guiding precepts we have struggled and succeeded.

Now as we prepare to enter college, we stand on the threshold of adult life. We must continue to live up to the ideals and uphold the tradition of greatness of the Latin School, which for the past few years has been an integral part of our lives. Through the guidance and counsel of our teachers we have developed our character, in integrity and in manliness, and having been instilled with the all-important qualities of loyalty and courage, we now stand ready to enter upon this new phase of our lives.

Even in this, our moment of glory, however, we may feel tinges of regret — perhaps because of the realization we must face the responsibilities of adulthood, perhaps because of the apprehension of a life, new and different, or perhaps because of an unwillingness to sever the bonds of friendship, which have been a mainstay of our high school years. It is our destiny, however, as we go on to college to form new ties of friendship, which hopefully will compensate for the loss of old classmates.

Gentlemen, today is not an end, but a beginning — the beginning of our struggle to reach our ultimate goals, but we must remember that, "Man is the architect of his own destiny."

From Its President

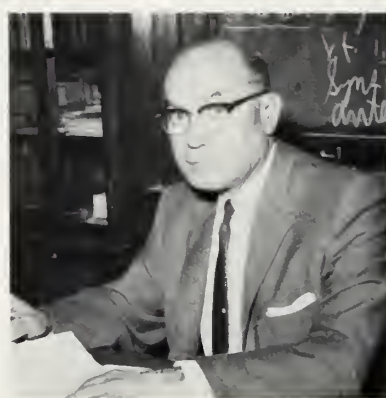

THE SENIOR CLASS CHRONICLE

CLASS VI

On September 8, 1960, over five hundred hopeful members of the Class of 1966 quietly wandered through the corridors of Boston Latin School in search of the auditorium. There we were greeted by Headmaster John J. Doyle, who predicted that only one-third of us would graduate in 1966, and Mr. J. W. Hopkinson, who assigned us to our homerooms.

After a few frustrating weeks of long homeroom periods spent filling out program cards, we finally settled down to our hectic schedules. Our first impression of our rotating schedule of math, English, U.S. History and geography, elementary science, gym, "study", and Latin was one of great awe. However, we quickly overcame this to spend time with the Latin homelessons assigned by Mr. Benjamin and Mr. Driscoll, and the English assigned by Mr. Norris and the nine other English teachers that each class had.

By October, most of us found time for a little enjoyment. We soon delighted in missing those last periods on Friday for the small expense of a football ticket. At the gridiron we saw our team bow only to B. C. High before overcoming English on Thanksgiving Day 20-16.

Mr. Russo

Mr. Daly

As "sixies" we also took part in sports. Twice a week in the Little Gym such teams as Notre Dame, Michigan State, and H.T.C. contended in the ritual of relay and basketball. The scores of these contests were conspicuously printed on our homeroom blackboards.

We took great pride in seeing John Fitzgerald Kennedy, son of a Latin School graduate, elected President of the United States. His invitation to the Band to participate in the inaugural parade brought great honor to our school and many lunch and gym periods were spent collecting money for the Band Booster Buttons.

Latin School Book Fair

Headmaster John J. Doyle

Returning to the school after the Christmas Vacation we felt a bit more secure. The difference between conjugations and declensions was becoming more lucid. The black arrows on the stairwell walls and the purple arm-bands worn by the cafeteria marshals now had their significance. We no longer searched for the fabled swimming pool and purchased fewer and fewer tickets for the use of the elevator. As we walked down the corridor we heard less hissing and we found our destination the first time without the use of our tattered program cards.

B.L.S. Band at Kennedy inauguration

Spring — the sound of firecrackers was a common one and everyone became a victim of springitis. We ate lunch in two minutes to hustle to the backyard with rubber balls and sneakers. After school, homeroom teams raced to the Fens for their weekly competition. One week of final exams and then . . .

On June 22, at 10:30 A.M. the final bell was muffled by a loud cheer. We had made it; our promotion blank proved it. As we ran down the halls for the last time that year we bid our goodbyes to our friends for the summer. Some we would see next year, some never again.

CLASS V

After an enjoyable summer vacation we entered the school as "fivesies" determined to show our superiority to the new coming sixies. We were certain of almost everything: our homeroom, our classmates, our courses; but not certain of our teachers.

At first we realized that we had been divided into two groups — those who studied math with Mr. Cirame for two periods a day and those who studied Waldronian math for one. But then we met Mr. Richards in room 107 and we were together again. Under his steady hand we delved into the Latin language by way of Ritchie's Second Steps. When we reached the intricacies of the gerundives, infinitives, and ablative absolutes, our understanding of the language vanished. In English that year we diagrammed sentences with Mr. Deely, in science we found that CO turned limewater milky, in history we memorized that the turning point of the revolution was Saratoga, and in study we had a practical course in aerodynamics.

Mr. Marciano

Mr. Jackson

1961-62 was a year of many world happenings. The Berlin crisis was frequently in the headlines. Dag Hamerskjold died in a tragic airplane crash over the Congo. The "race for space" was spotlighted when Russian cosmonaut Titov spent an entire day orbiting the earth and astronaut John Glenn manned a five-hour flight.

On the national sports scene Roger Maris out-homered Mickey Mantle to break Babe Ruth's record. Professional football finally came to Boston, and Babe Parilli led the Patriots to a very good season. The Celtics repeated as world champs.

In school sports the football team, hampered by early season injuries, lost to English 39 - 0. The basketball team, plagued by in-eligibility, experienced a building year. The swimming team, sparked by freshman standouts, finished with a 6-2 record. The hockey team lost only to B. C. High on its way to the City League title, and the baseball team carried off the city pennant.

An intramural basketball league, which was to last three years, was formed during this year. Although we knew we would be in no condition to attend classes immediately after the games, we came to school at 7:30 (usually well before the refs.) half asleep, but eager to play.

In March we were faced with a choice: to study the "dick"s and "dunn"s of German, or the "dans"s and "dehors"s of French. With spring came the usual Prize Declamation, paperback books, water pistols, and chessboards. Then we realized we had completed another year and we eagerly looked forward to becoming high school freshmen.

CLASS IV

We entered Class IV and were joined by 200 boys from various junior high schools. The addition of this IV B section, filled the vacancies created by those who had left during the previous two years.

Mr. Cornelius Murphy

This year, along with the regular stand-bys of English and Latin, we were overexposed to Ancient History, civics, algebra, a new language, and a new kind of gym. In English we studied poetry and recited oral themes. In Latin we struggled desperately with Baker and Inglis, but trotted merrily through Caesar. In ancient history we walked through Babylonia with Mr. C. Murphy and swam the Nile with Mr. Powers. Civics gave us our first look at government and algebra introduced us to Messrs. A,B,C.

Those who elected French were greeted by the Dynamic Duo, Mr. Scully and Mr. McGuffin. Mr. Scully gave an excellent course in French seances and Mr. McGuffin's course was enriched by daily Arabic lessons. For those who elected German, they sprechen Deutsch with either Mr. Triantafel or Mr. Donovan.

In school sports, football looked promising as we beat South Boston 8-6. However we lost the big one to the fired up boys in blue 32-6. The Hockey team for the second consecutive year won the city title and was eliminated in the State Tourney by Arlington 3-1 in an overtime period after a near-sighted goal judge failed to see the apparent winning goal. The basketball team finished with a 6-8 record and the swimming team finished with the second best record in Eastern Massachusetts.

Mr. McGuffin

Mr. Kagan

President Kennedy

During this year of the "finks" and "ferns" we were visited by two distinguished men. One was the great Sam Jones, Celtic basketball star, who headed the Cavalcade of Sports demonstrating his skill in tennis; the other, Arthur Fiedler of the Boston Pops, who conducted our orchestra in the first (now annual) Festival of Music.

The last part of the year was spent choosing our electives for Class III. We were given the opportunity to select from French, German, Greek, Russian, history, chemistry-physics, and chemistry-physics-advanced math. The choice was a difficult one and important, for it marked the first time we had to seriously consider our plans for the future.

CLASS III

At last we had passed the half-way point in our Latin School career. We had survived the past three years in which many of our classmates had failed, and now, abounding with confidence and pride, we began the latter half of our journey.

The misconception that we would breeze through our sophomore year was dispelled quite abruptly when the first report cards were issued. In our new curriculum, civics was replaced by health education, chemistry was taught by pictures, and math made us aware of the meaning of ZM, SAS, SSS, X, and Y. The courses were complicated all the more by the characters of some teachers whom we were encountering for the first time.

In room 124, many sophomores were fortunate enough to experience Mr. O'Callahan, a genuine Latin School tradition, and his unorthodox method of inculcating the words of Cicero into the reluctant minds of his students. Many of us, in our attempt to rip apart the Latin language word by word, were foiled by Mr. O'Callahan's prompt reply to this futility: "You're bewildered and befuddled . . . NEXT!!" Or perhaps he would become so frustrated with us that he would mutter his famous chorus, "hubba, hubba", which simply meant for the next scholar to try his luck. However, those of us who understood Mr. O'Callahan will always be grateful to him for his persistence in attempting to fill our heads with true knowledge.

In other corners of the school on the third floor, two classes of sophomores attempted to learn some French from a novice, who was a steadfast revolutionary attempting to make vast changes in current teaching methods. He furnished one of the most uproarious and colorful pages of our sophomore year.

Mr. Lambert

Class III, however, was not entirely full of good moments. In Dallas, on November 22, our beloved President John F. Kennedy was assassinated. The nation and the world were greatly shocked and sorrowed by the untimely death of our dynamic and youthful leader. We at the Latin School were especially bereaved, knowing we had also lost a dear friend.

On the sports scene, our football team experienced a better than average season, yet lost to English 18-12. Our hockey team for the third consecutive year captured the City League Championship with an excellent 12-2-0 record. Our basketball team experienced a rebuilding year, the baseball team once again had a fine season and the swimming team finished fifth in Eastern Mass. competition.

Mr. Max Levine

In our sophomore year we all took the N.E.D.T. This test had the twofold purpose of acquainting us with college board type examinations and serving as a guideline for further preparation. All our attention was then focused upon our junior year, the most difficult and decisive year of all.

CLASS II

The very first day of our junior year we realized a change had taken place. A new headmaster, Dr. Wilfred O'Leary, was now at the helm and rumors of his stringent regulations astounded all of us. The possibility of the dispensing with homeroom periods, the releasing of musical organizations, and of lengthening the school day fortunately proved to be false. When in an assembly during L2 and L3 we met Dr. O'Leary, we found him to be both a leader and an exemplar of the Aristocracy of the Intellect, and we realized that other changes were to take place.

Miss Taylor

"Let lose the dogs of war!"

Although the regulations which disturbed us most were those pertaining to our dress habits, we soon came to recognize that the "sack" coats would help create a new atmosphere of pride in our school.

October brought our first step in the race for college for at that time we all took the PSAT.

December was a grievous month in the Latin School. First, Max Levine, who was connected with the school for more than sixty years, passed away. In every phase of his life — whether as a student, teacher and head of department, or as secretary of the Alumni Association — "Mr. Chips" had exemplified the ideals of the Latin School man.

Then during the Christmas vacation, we heard of the tragic death of Colonel Kelley. Although his death brought the end to one hundred and five years of military drill at the Latin School, his memory will live on as an inspiration to all who knew him. We admired him not only as a military instructor, but also as a friend. His guidance will always be appreciated; his humor we can never forget.

In Sports, the football team pocketed the city championship with a win over English on Turkey Day 24-22. That night at the Victory Dance, Classes I and II and their dates spent an enjoyable evening dancing to the music of Jimmy McHale and his orchestra. In other sports, the Hockey team compiled a winning record of 7-6-1, the Purple-and-White five ran into tough competition, the track team sprinted their way to a second place in both the city and Reggie meets, and the swimming team finished the season with an 8-2 record in high school competition.

Mr. Gearin

Mr. Carroll

March brought two important events, The National Merit Exam was administered and the school opened its doors to the Accreditation Committee, whose final report was a great tribute to our school.

In May, after we had struggled through the college boards and the seniors had left, we held our class elections, which took place for the first time in the junior year. When the votes were tallied, the following students emerged victorious: Tom Carty, President; Dave Bougopolous, Vice President; Barry Stevens, Secretary; and Gerry Sarno, Treasurer. Elected to the Class Committee were: Roger Verny, Ed Baird, Mark Harris, Gerry Howland, and Steve Paris.

Our junior year ended with Prize Declamation and the senior play Julius Caesar. Somehow we had made it, and now we eyed our forthcoming and final year at B.L.S.

CLASS I

Seniors! We had finally reached that position which we had envied for so many years. We faced a few extremely important and difficult months and were able to continue working only with the promise of school with no work at the end. There were, however, before we could reach this period of relaxation, several crucial details to contend with. The first was college applications. They seemed like a vast pile of forms to fill out on which our whole high school career was to be recorded. College boards came again and could no longer in any sense be considered practice. This was really it: our last chance to change anything that might affect our acceptance to college.

Finally they arrived — proof that we were seniors at Latin School. We hustled up to 306 and fought off our fellow classmates until Romulus the Ring Man, assisted by Remus the Ring Boy, gave us our rings.

By January all the applications were completed, and we began to expect the school work to taper off to almost nothing. That time somehow never came; however, we distracted ourselves with such recreation as the Music Festival and the Mid-Winter Dance, which was not held at New England Life Hall.

The biology labs on the third floor and the guidance suite on the first floor began to take shape.

SCHOOL STREET - SOUTH SIDE
1812 - 1814

These new facilities were evidence of the revitalization of the school curriculum and the increased interest in the individual student.

The senior year was a time when more than ever before we felt strong ties to our school. Inspired by the performances of our teams on the field and urged on by the Victory Club, our spirit rose. We wanted to make the most of every game and every school-affiliated activity, for we knew that each event was bringing us closer to the end of our high school career.

It was a successful year for school sports. The football team rallied behind coach Smith. This "Band of Brothers" lost only one and topped off the season by making English eat crow on Thanksgiving, thereby tying the series rivalry. The hockey team finished with a winning record. The basketball team looked surprisingly good in pre-season games and rode its winning ways to a 9-3 record and a tourney berth. The team gave their all at the tourney and were spurred on by the best cheering section ever to hit the Garden. The swim team lost only to Wellesley and finished second in Eastern Mass. competition.

Messrs. Neville and O'Leary

Mr. Cleary

Mr. Sullivan

Class Day, the school play Richard II, and the first Boston Latin School Night at the Pops highlighted the months of April and May. The great success of these activities was due to the talent of Latin School students and the cooperation of parents and school officials.

Friday the thirteenth took on a special meaning for the Class of 1966, for this day in the merry month of May, dropped its ominous overtones to become one of ebullient ecstasy.

On June first the Farewell Prom was held at the Blue Hills Country Club. This occasion was especially significant as it marked the final social event of our Latin School career.

On June second we returned to the auditorium for Awards Night. After the honors were presented to our fellow classmates, we departed from the school for the last time as Latin School students.

Graduation, held at the War Memorial Auditorium for the first time, culminated our dream which for six years had seemed so far away. On receiving our diplomas, we saw the consummation of six years of effort. We realized that it had all been more than worthwhile for Latin School had done more than her share in making men of us all.

This then was our senior year, confusing and busy, but exciting and meaningful. The friendships begun over the past few years were made lasting for life and our feeling for our school became ingrained in us.

It is really impossible to express in a few words all that our Latin School means to us, all that she has given us, all that she has done for us. Whenever two Latin grads of the Class of '66 get together, their thoughts will surely turn to their days at Latin. Our highest hope is that this chronicle will serve them as a guide.

So what is in a School?

This past year has shown us what the Latin School really gives to its students. While Boston Latin has imparted an excellent education, a gentlemanly bearing, and a desire to excel in life, our teachers have provided us with the off-beat education. However indebted we may be to the school, we are equally indebted to our teachers for what they taught us outside the curriculum.

— to Mr. Jameson — our thanks for: . . . the true meaning of "festeris" . . . the ability to maintain an intelligent appearance even when we are thoroughly confused . . . an understanding of audible silence . . . teaching us to say "That's the way the cookie crumbles" in Latin.

— to Mr. John Keiran ("Caculus" to his dear friends) a great big hug for: . . . revealing the limitations of the finger and toe system . . . sparing us "proofs too long and tedious for us to go into" . . . equating laziness with lack of interest.

— to Mr. D. J. Shea — our warmest thanks for: . . . a working knowledge of the Decimal System from 0.00 to 4.00 . . . an idea of what Chemistry entails . . . the inside story on the hydrogenation of chicken fat.

— to Mr. Allan J. Doherty (who still has no nickname after thirty odd years at the Latin School) our heartfelt gratitude for: . . . a who's who of historical circles . . . the relation of humorous incidents at the War College from 1941 to 1946 . . . telling us what is really wrong with the Supreme Court.

— to Mr. David Miller — a big soggy kiss for: . . . reassuring us that there is no such thing as a Harpy . . . showing us where the six Spondaic lines in Virgil are . . . being an outstanding example of Stoicism.

— to Mr. Karl Miethe, twenty-nine admiring glances for: . . . being physically fit . . . showing us clever tricks to do at cocktail parties . . . showing us that 2 plus 2 cannot equal 4 . . . revealing the innermost secrets of the carburetor.

We also reserve many thanks and much gratitude for those teachers who taught us . . . how to wear a beret . . . that an athletic scholarship is as good as an academic one . . . that Latin School is truly an individual and singular experience.

The Men From A.U.N.T.I.E.

Deep in the innermost parts of the earth under the halls of stately B.L.S. is located the headquarters of a top secret organization, dedicated to the spread of education and to the destruction of illiteracy. Now taking place in this dark retreat is the organization's 102nd annual conference, wherein each agent is giving his progress report of the past year. The presiding officer, ace agent V. W. Driscoll, is addressing the group assembled before him.

- V.W.: All agents in all seats! If we want to get out by 2:00, we had better proceed with the reports, boys. Let us first hear from Registered agent 211 on how he has fared with the enemy.
- 211: After a long hard struggle I finally succeeded in teaching the boys to speak English pretty good. But, to tell the truth, I did need some help after several close shaves.
- V.W.: What do you mean?
- 211: When things got rough, I decided to leave the class in the charge of my intellectual assistant — code name, Fuzzy
- V.W.: Good man. And what do you have to say, 115?
- ... 115! ... 115! ... Where the heck is that agent?
- 211: He just left to re-fill his teapot.
- V.W.: Without signing out?? For shame. Go fetch him, Agent Top Banana.
- T.B.: Not me, George. Let me give my report now so I can hurry back to the playroom.
- V.W.: Then, by all means, proceed.
- T.B.: Well, George, I found no particular trouble in keeping the boys busy during the year. Half the periods I had them mixing pretty colors, and the rest of the time ...
- 330: (laughingly interrupting): You had them fetching coffee for you (Agent 330 falls down and rolls on the floor in riotous laughter.)
- T.B.: Just remember I'm the ...
- 330: (Getting up) Yeah, I know Top banana.
- T.B.: (Quickly) And top joker too!
- 330: Well, let's not quibble. You're right, I'm wrong.
- V.W.: Boyes, boyes, please! We must proceed. Agent 233, let's hear your accomplishments of the past year.
- 233: Gee, sir, I'm sorry I don't have that many achievements to report ... But I did finally finish taking the attendance last week. (330 falls down laughing again.)
- V.W.: Since there seems to be no further business to carry on, I hereby declare ...
- Messenger: (Running in) Sir, sir, agent 115 asked me to deliver this note to you.
- V.W.: (Taking note and reading aloud) I request the presence of this multitude in joining yours truly for tea at my summer resort. I would be most gratified ...
- (As V.W. Driscoll continues to read, the group flees to the exits to make their way to 115's house. V.W. stops reading, descends the podium, steps over some laughing figure, gets into his flashy sports car, and pedals his way to join his fellow agents.)

You showed us how to make a still.
And now when we get through with lab,
We're all quite ready for the slab.

Oh, yes you try to teach us German

A DAY IN COURT

Here we are at the final 1966 session of the B.L.S. district court #115 with Chief Justice Earl W. Shea presiding. All is silent as the court rises and watches His Honor adorn the bench. The gavel sounds and the Chief Justice speaks.

Chief Justice: You Ginks may be seated. Baliff Julius English, please read the first young case.
(The room is silent)

C.J.: Young Julie! Where is that young bloke?
A voice from the back of the room: It's Thursday, he's absent.

C.J.: Then where is young Sal?

The voice: He went out for a smoke.

C.J.: Well, therefore, if that's the case, I don't know; I don't know. Perhaps young Jim Deutsch would act as the baliff. How about it Jim?

J.D.: I'd be happy to Justice Shea.

C.J.: Call me Chief Justice, if you please.

J.D.: Sorry about that Chief. The first case: number 333, the state against Master Morton. He is charged with the illegal issuance of home-lessons for the months of May and June.

C.J.: Have you any defense, Moe?

M.M.: I plead the school rule number 17398218334, section K, part 12, which states that if . . .

C.J.: That's a lot of hooie, Willso. I sentence you to ie days in solitary.

J.D.: The next case is #114, the state against Guy Antonio Perfumi. The charge is an illegal adoption claim to 31 misguided young men.

C.J.: What do you plead, JOjo.

G.A.P.: All I said was "O.K. Girls, listen to Daddy."

C.J.: (In counsel with J.D.): Do you know where he got that matching tie and handkerchief?
(Aloud): I sentence you to an unforeseen eventuality, and it's Top Secret.

J.D.: The last case is against Papa Gordon for illegal operation of a still in the presence of minors.

Hobbies: Reading, Earning a Living, baby-sitting for grandsons.

C.J.: Have you any young defense?

P.G.: I'll mark you.

C.J.: Is det so? D'ya min it? . . . Young Max, senator from Laboratoria, passed a bill stating that those operating a brewery be sentenced to two years in either the Army or Navy.

C.J.: (cont.): Which do you choose?

P.G.: I'll take the Navy.

C.J.: Don't go in the Navy, Jack, they'll kill 'ya. . . Court dismissed.

As the Chief Justice rises and leaves the court room, the court officials grant a pardon to Messrs. Gordon, Shea, Weinert, Beninati, Salvucci, Finn, Donovan, Leiter, and Clark and wish to thank all those who took part in the trial for their cooperation and understanding.

Dear Muther,

Ya know, dis ain't such a bad place, I mean ya get learnt an' stuff. Oh, lots a times da teach gets on yer back maybe, but dat don't matter. Ya know what I mean? Like I bin in dis skool fer four years an' I ain't never come away hatin' no teachers er nuthin'. I mean, der mighta bin a coupla ones I wuzn't too keen on, but I ain't never hated nun of 'em. Aza madder fact, I could even say I like a cupple maybe. Take my swimmin' coach, fer eggs ample. He's my homerum taecher too, an' I don't tink der's nobody in da room who don't tink he's a awright guy. (his pitcher's onna toppa dis page).

Den der's dat histry guy, Mr. Burgundy. I mean, I herd guys sayin' summa hiz queshuns ain't too sharp, but den da guys I herd dat wuz talkin' wuzn't so edurite neither. Say like if he astya who 'rected da sine at Coopers-town, den it must 'ave sum importan' hysterical snifficance, rite?

Ya know sumpin' else? Summa da guys sez our English teach, Mr. Lannergun, don't give us da rite stuff ta reed. Like I mean I seen guys reedin' da racin' forms an' Candy an' stuff like dat in English. Even still tho, 'spite a alla tings dey sez 'bout him, I tinks he done a gud job, 'cause I sez like evry kid inna room is eazy as artiklit as me, an' dat's goin' sum, rite?

My maff teach Mr. Devilry, I like himma lot. I mean, he tawks like me an' all, an' he an' me we gotta rappoor bitween us. Maybe me an' summa da guys ain't past maff wunts even yet, but den us guys iz stronger in English dan maff.

Doze tree are da guys dat evrybuddy haz. Den we splidup fer fer da ressa da klasses. I gut Monsewer Walche fer Frensh, an' da ressa da guys gut Monsewer Clock, 'bout which I dunno mush, but I herd he's priddy kool too.

An' I gut Mr. Litre fer kemstry. He's reel gud, 'cept sometimes I don't unnerstan' da subjecked. Summa da guys who ain't gut secken yeer kem, gut firshear kemstry wid Mr. Shay. I dunno mush 'bout him eder, but dey sez he's gud an' funny in all like dat.

Well, ma, I gess dere ain't mush lef' fer me ta say 'cept dat I tink I gut a reel gud edjaka-shun an' dat alla werk wuz shoor worfile.

Lossa Luv, Ma.

THE EMPEROR'S COURT

Scene: The court of His Most Regal Majesty, Emperor Locke. His royal subjects are gathered around, awaiting, with minds all a twitter, the reading of the daily proclamation.

Emperor: Now lookit, be quiet! I want to take the attendance here, before I read any proclamation. Get in your seats . . . and stay there! (reads) There will be an assembly of all citizens of this Empire during the lunch hour today.

Royal Subjects: (rising from their seats and shouting) Rebellion! Down with Lunch Hour Assemblies! Down with proclamations! (stamp out of court en masse)

Emperor: (rubbing forehead) O tempora, o mores! Where's my counsellors? (counsellors enter with flourish. Counsellors include: Percy Bysshe Landrigan, Imperial Poet and Literal Interpreter of Allegories; the Marvellous Flash Gordon, Court Wizard and Part-Time Dabbler in the Physical Sciences; Prof. Bergen, World-Renowned Historian and Seeker of Trivia; Dr. E. Branca, Royal Mathematician and Distributor of Calcululean Confusion; and Mort Weinert, Court Jester and Grand Keeper of the Addition and Lunch Tables.)

Imperial Poet: Hrump, Your Majesty, I have, uh, just written the daily poem; Listen to my dramatic reading and my wonderful speaking voice, and never mind the fact that the poem means nothing.

Emperor: (apologising silently to the Muss of Poetry) Are you kidding? Off with your head!

(Imperial Poet, protesting mildly, is dragged away by State Execution Officers Donovan and Walsh. Hangman Jacob grins malevolently; his upper molars can be seen.)

Emperor: Well, Mr. Wizzard, what have you come up with today?

Court Wizard: What's that? Oh, this little experiment here shows how a magnetic field around two positively charged pith balls varies inversely to the magnitude of acceleration of particles involved in unsuccessful elastic collisions.

Emperor: Off with your head! I hate people who think they know it all, even if they really do.

(Executioners drag C. W. away.)

(Meanwhile, the Royal Mathematician and the Court Jester have begun to fight, hurling sines and logs at each other. The R.M., however, brandishing his deadly integral sign, runs up and impales the C.J. on the wall.)

Emperor: Hey, Royal Mathematician, what did you do that for?

R.M.: That stupid Court Jester just would not agree with me that all tumpas that yip also woggle in their spare time.

Emperor: Off with your head! I don't like people who come up arguing over a small point. (Executioners again) What's your problem, Historian?

World-Renowned Historian: Well, Emperor, as we have it here, today's bit of trivia goes like this: Uh, what homeroom at Boston Latin School is obviously far superior to every other in pupil brain-power, teacher selection, and in the number of boys successfully cutting a class each day?

Emperor: Why, room 130, of course; everybody knows that.

(Historian, upon hearing these words, grows deathly pale. Thoroughly convinced that his life is now without purpose, he runs up and smashes his head against a brick wall several times.)

Emperor: (realizing the futility of carrying on further court business because of the sudden extreme scarcity of conscious counsellors) I'm going home. (walks out of court, carefully locking both doors behind him).

H.R. 131

"Once upon a midnight dreary,
While I pondered weak and weary . . ."

An apparition appeared—a dim figure, with four eyes, a receding hairline, and a smirk upon his face. He said, "I am your guide. Call me Hoppy." He took my hand and led me down a passage, which was illuminated by a strange purple glow. I saw an opening drawing near. All of a sudden a weird creature, wearing white socks and a purple tie, sprung at us and demanded to see our "yellow badges of cowardice". My guide had his ready, but all I had was my M.B.T.A. badge. Grudgingly he admitted us.

I thought to myself, "Will I ever get out of here?" My guide, seeming to read my mind, said, "I can give you a definite maybe." Then he lead me to a chamber with a strange, melodic humming coming from within. He said, "This is Den 131." Suddenly from inside the chamber came a roar (almost), "Stop-the-mus-ic!" But the "music" continued. Then, "Stet-son, take-your-seat!" "Where do you want it?" A high-pitched squeal came from the back. "Cur-ley, stop-that!" In revulsion I backed away. My guide said, "he's a mean one. He played Scrooge in the Christmas pageant." We went on.

On our way to the next chamber, we passed a creature in a funny uniform. He was mumbling to himself, "Left is right; right is left."

The next chamber was inhabited by the fire-breathing Prince of Bull. When I stuck my head in to get a better look, the Prince growled, "You, give out the math paper!" Astonished, I replied, "What for?" "I know what you'll need next year; I taught the course," he snapped. I left hurriedly.

My guide took me up a steep flight of stairs. At the top I spotted an old navy bloke throwing wads of paper into a wastebasket.

I asked him why he was doing it. He looked at me and said, "Don't be a gink. It's better than throwing cheeseburgers, Moe."

I was becoming desperate, so we hurried on. Next we came to a chamber that seemed distinctly out of place. It was ruled by the Graf vom Bildzumwort. He looked at me kindly and invited me to take a rest and look at his slides of Paradise.

Having thus rested, my guide took me to an empty chamber. He seated me, gave me a pen, and said, "Fill out these torture forms." Horrified, I bolted and ran down a strange corridor. On and on and on I ran. Suddenly, blackness. Nothing.

The next morning I awoke covered with a sheep-skin which I had never seen before. I had a strange feeling of triumph.

What a nightmare!!!

William Dickinson
Martin Krinsky

On April 23, 1635, driven by a sense of duty and the town council, Philemon Pormont established Boston Latin School, that apex of education which has now culminated in the greatest scholastic hoax yet devised, the fumbling felons of 135.

Within the sacred portals of this travesty of the intellect lie such oddities as an A train leaving 168th Street, three magic needles of a short-lived Christmas Tree, and McMahon the match chewer. Not far off can be heard the fearful cry of the Penta, as Ortendahl loses another chess game. Zielonka runs around looking for the M.I.T. Admissions Officer, while Grasse and Krauss carefully eye each others history marks. The fearful Burke enters, cracking his three inch wet noodle as everyone rolls on the floor in hysterical tears. Justly disgusted sits Mr. Desmond, Lord of the Sign Out Book. (What's that?)

Hobbies: Reading, sports.

Once a day, the imperishably intellectual denizens of 135 ooze forth to battle K.D. (alias Ju Ju), the soporific Salvucci, and the Majestic Keeper of the Fuses (5c apiece). Reeling from their tragic performance, they successfully assault the impenetrable(?) lunch line, only later to be Smith-en (ouch!) by the Leiter (ditto) blows of Messrs. Resnick and Higgins. To prove their valor, they recoagulate for eight minutes of wailing led by Finnegan and his bathtub fleet, until 2:04 when the entire group passes out.

Instant Apathy.

RES ATHLETICAE

On the field of many colors,
Latin's banners fly.
Cheer on cheer like volley thunder
Echoes to the sky.
See the Latin team advancing,
Gaining more and more.
So, we'll fight, fight fight!
With all our might!
Dear old Latin evermore!

BOSTON LATIN FIGHT SONG

Explosive Offense, Fierce Tacklers—Desire,

In his first year as head coach, "Howie" Smith fielded a group of talented and spirited football players determined to match the fine record of last year's team. Through all-out effort this team fought its way through bigger opposing teams to gain second place in the City League.

Led by captain "Tiger" Burns, and supported by some of the best talent in the league, the offense proved to be explosive at times. The defensive unit, carrying some of the fiercest tacklers in the state, yielded an average of only one touchdown per game.

Gene Ferris sealed off his end, and many an opposing quarterback saw that awesome "claw" break up intended pass plays. Ed McDonald and Al Magliaro, going both ways, were disaster to the opposition, building a solid defensive wall, and opening holes for the running backs. The "Tiger" earned his name anew by his savage tackling. The talent of these four players was recognized by the sports writers who selected them to the All-Teams.

The performance of the team in its seven victories, and even in its lone defeat, is a tribute to the Latin squad, which possessed those qualities which make a winning team — desire, sweat, and guts.

Fitting Climax . . .

LATIN VS. ENGLISH

In a season marked by courage, determination, and spirit, the Latin-English game provided a fitting climax. At stake was second place in the City League and a chance to even the traditional rivalry. This game — the last for the seniors on the squad — was indeed the most meaningful for the Class of '66.

The first substantial offensive drive of the game was climaxed at five minutes into the first quarter. Jack Burns, capping a six-play 75-yard march, jaunted behind crisp blocking to score unmolested from the 31. For the remainder of the half, however, the defensive units of both teams dominated play. Both the Purple and the Blue seemed almost impenetrable, especially when backed to their respective goal lines.

In the third quarter, the Tiger roared over again, this time from the three, to put another Latin tally on the board. English rebounded with a score at the two-minute mark of the fourth quarter. "Scotty Guild's 87 yard run wherein his teammates blocked out all English High's defense was a thing of beauty. It looked to the audience that Scotty flew, not ran, the 87 yards . . ."

Midway through the final period, Y. A. Russo, who had devotedly served as back-up quarterback throughout the season, entered the game in a halfback slot. On a pitch-out from Vin Costello, Y. A. heaved a perfect 35 yard bomb to end Bill Gallagher who legged it into the end zone. English scored again, but the game was out of reach.

Seniors and underclassmen, bursting with happiness and pride, mobbed the sidelines. At the final gun they overflowed onto the field to pay tribute to a team and coaches who had worked so hard and competed so well.

Good Speed,

With a record of 7-6-1, the 1966 hockey team captured third place in the City League. Several key games were lost by one-goal margins, and with any luck at all the purple pucksters could have skated off with all the honors.

The good speed and fine shooting of Assistant Captain Jim Curley, John Powers, and Jim Garvin combined with the defensive brawn of Captain Roger Verney and Assistant Captain Jay Crowley to compose one of the most solid sextets in the league. Two masked marvels, Stu Kadish and Dan Rea, shared the net-minding chores.

Fine Shooting, Defensive Brawn . . . But No Luck.

The climax of the season came when All Star selection Roger Verney, on a break away, zoomed past B. C. High's defenders with one minute left to score the winning goal and ruin a perfect record for the high flying Eaglets.

Bolstering the team effort were Paul O'Neil, Jim Riley, Bill O'Connor, John Burton, and Buck Rogers. Next year, under the guidance of Coach Thomas and Captain-Elect Paul O'Neil, the hockey team should once again be strong competitors for the City League crown.

Third Row: DiCara (Mgr.), Kertzman (Mgr.), Fong, Whitley, P., Henry, Maibor, McLaughlin.

Talent and Spirit...

This year's spirited Purple quintet not only finished runner-up in the city league, but also qualified for a berth in the Tech Tourney for the first time in seven years. The team was led by the high scoring and rebounding of center Vin Costello, the sharp shooting and play-making of guard Tom Morrissey, and the hustle of Captain Dave Whitley, whose leadership and all-around good play helped create the spirit that carried the team through the season. The talent of these outstanding players was recognized by their selection to the All-City and All-Conference teams.

Steve Carey more than ably filled the other guard position, while Dave Bougopoulos, and Paul Whitley shared the second forward spot. Hustling John Henry, subbing in the backcourt, and Ed "Hoops" Murray in the forecourt provided that extra spark of the sixth man. Guards Bob Maibor, and James Fong, and forwards Jim Hurley and Frank Shay, completed the varsity squad.

The team would like to thank the entire student body and the Victory Club in particular for their outstanding support at all the games. The cheering often inspired the squad to give that second effort which spelled the difference between victory and defeat.

Look! Up in the sky...

Out to Prove Ourselves—

and ready to do their all to rouse the team to victory. The players and cheering section were really "up" for this game. One sports reporter had picked Durfee by 40 and another had predicted that if school support could make the difference, Durfee would have a decided advantage. We were out to prove ourselves — team and school.

In the first quarter things looked especially bright for the Purple. Behind the superb shooting of Vin Costello, Latin surged to an 11-7 lead. The cheering section went wild — football cheers, air horn, and all. The end of the quarter, however, found Durfee leading 17-14.

The BLS hoopsters tied the game at several stages during the second quarter and even went ahead 23-22 at one point. Tom Morrissey began to hit long jumpers, and heavily favored Durfee held but a slim 30-27 advantage at the half.

... football cheers, air-horn, and all.

TECH TOURNEY

LATIN VS DURFEE

Throughout the regular season, as the basketball team began to compile its winningest record in years, hope began to build for a possible tourney berth. As the season drew to a close, the BLS five earned that berth with a hard-fought victory over Trade and clinched it by beating Dot 80 to 59.

We knew that we would be meeting tough competition in the Tourney, and when the first-round games were announced, we found ourselves pitted against perennial Tourney powerhouse Durfee. As the night of the game drew closer, tension and excitement began to build and the school began to rally support for our team.

On March 4, at 8:40 P.M. the Latin quintet took to the court. A rousing cheer went up from the first balcony where, tightly packed in a large section behind a proud Latin banner, over 300 BLS supporters had gathered, overflowing with spirit

Behind the superb shooting of Vin Costello . . .

Team and School

In the third quarter, Latin had a chance to move ahead as Durfee scored only 12. The shots just would not fall, however, and a cold-handed Latin team could manage only 9 points. Our spirit remained high, and a resolute team took the court for the final quarter, determined to overcome the 42-36 deficit.

With four minutes left and Durfee ahead by 9, Vin Costello, who had pumped in 24 big points, fouled out. While the Garden erupted in tribute to Vin's great all-around effort, Durfee began to think they had the game on ice. However, displaying the desire and determination that had made them a winner all season, the Latin five refused to quit. Two quick baskets by Morrissey and one each by Whitley and Carey cut the Durfee lead to 55-50 with 80 seconds left.

Unfortunately, Durfee's previous Tourney experience prevailed and the Latin rally fell short. In a seat-squirmer Durfee, the eventual Eastern Mass. Champs, gained the hardest victory of the entire Tourney, 58-50.

In defeat at the Tourney, as in victory during the season, the BLS team and supporters did themselves proud.

Latin Over "Powers" Most Competition

Despite the loss of five top swimmers to college, this year's swimming team did extremely well against all competition. With meets against high schools, prep schools (Phillip's Exeter, Phillip's Andover, and Moses Brown), and college freshman (Tufts, MIT, Brown, and Coast Guard Academy), the BLS swimming team enjoys one of the best high school sport's schedules in the country.

The BLS swimmers, inspired by their fellow teammates and determined to prove themselves, kicked their way to an 8-1 record in the Eastern Massachusetts League. During the season school records were set by Co-Captain Barry Stevens in the butterfly (1:05.1), and Steve Meline, Jim Pickel, Roger Gould, and Tim O'Leary in the 400 yard freestyle relay (4:03).

The medley relay team of Pete Ryan, Pete Fritz, Barry Stevens, and Tim O'Leary, the best in Eastern Mass., placed fourth in the state meet at Bridgewater.

Led by Co-Captain Mike Donahue, the New England AAU champion, and supported strongly by sophomore Pete Fritz, BLS maintained the distinction of having the best diving team in the state.

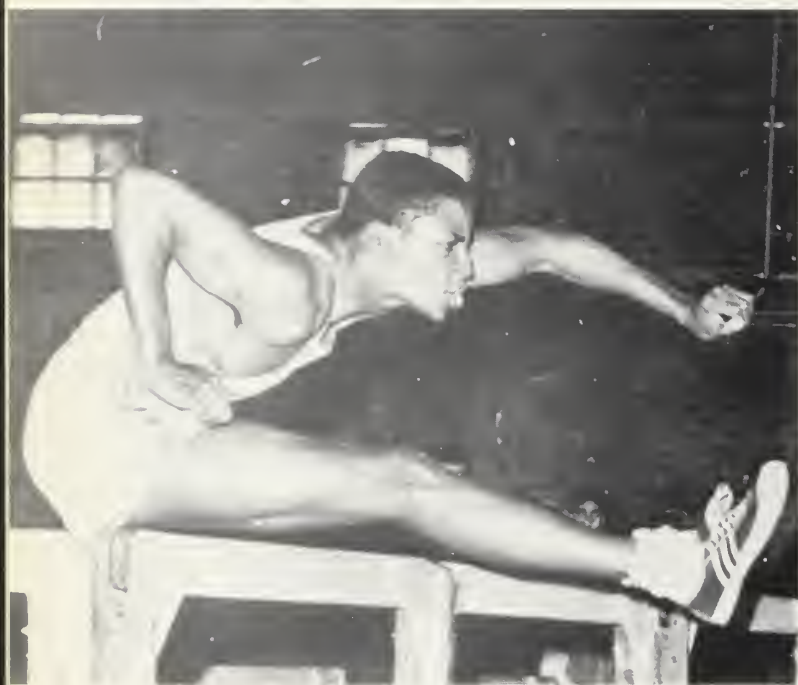

This strong, versatile, and determined team was able to succeed only through the coaching, skill, and deep personal interest Mr. Powers lent to each member of the team.

Savor the Baugh up and away.

This year's track team, under the able tutelage of Coaches Fielding and Patten, enjoyed one of the most successful campaigns ever. Led by Co-Captains Ted Tedeschi and Joe Baugh, the team defeated arch-rivals English and several other opponents by solid margins.

The core of Latin's squad was composed mainly of veteran seniors, who, over the years, learned to loathe the bitter taste of defeat and savor the sweetness of a hard-won victory. Many excellent performances were given by Baugh, Tedeschi, Duclos, Judge, John Powers, Azzone, Bobula, and Lowe.

Much of the team's success was due to the shot-put team which had its first undefeated season in over a decade often providing the runners with the bulging leads that enabled them to "run away" from their foes.

The return of many fine performers, such as Fournier, winner of the B mile in this year's Reggies, certainly augurs well for the future of track at B.L.S.

CROSS COUNTRY

This year's hard-working team of harriers proved to be most successful. After easily besting Dot and Trade, Latin moved on to defeat English decisively. In the next meet, despite the fine efforts of such able runners as Ken Paige, Steve Duclos, Steve Carey, Pete Judge, Bob McNamee, and Rich Fournier, the Purple was edged by an extremely strong Technical squad. Latin gained the runner-up position in both the Regimental and City Championships, the two most important meets of the season.

Next year Captain-elect Steve Carey will lead a fine group of returning lettermen. We hope that this talent, trained and developed by the expert coaching of Mr. Fielding, will capture the long-awaited City League title for the Latin Team.

Purple Power, Pitching... Pennant (Probably)

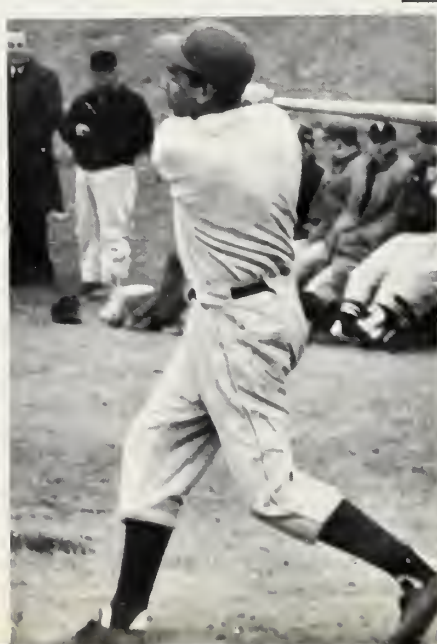

Even though the squad has only three returning starters, Latin School's nine has an excellent chance to retain its City League championship. Jim Curley, a power hitting infielder, Ed Laucka, a pitcher with an overpowering knuckleball, and captain Bob Hansen, a two year All Scholastic selection, form the nucleus for a winning team.

A pitching staff which Coach Patten calls "better than average" consists of such fine pitchers as Ed Laucka, Dave Tickner, Greg Grandfield, and "Buddy" Wyse. With this fine pitching staff and the added talent of newcomers Y. A. Russo, Mike John, Dennis Kearney, Dick Zeghibe, and Bob Sheehan, Latin has to be favored to repeat as City League champions.

Hustle and Hard Play...

Led by Captain Roman Dashawetz, the soccer team, hustled and played hard throughout their eight-game schedule. However, due to lack of size this "coachless" team experienced a rather disappointing fall season.

Special recognition should be given to the defense which, led by Assistant Captain Ira Jacobs, Bill Brown, and goalie Pete Fisher, allowed only six goals in five games. The offense was always on the move as a result of the efforts and drive of Captain Roman Dashawetz, James Lauterbach, and Alan Cheah.

Despite this year's unsuccessful record, the squad is anxiously looking ahead to the next season with the hope of more school participation and interest.

Excellent Conditioning—Smoother and Stronger

After an encouraging fall season, a more experienced Latin Crew Team is eagerly anticipating a successful showing in the spring. During the fall our boys worked out each day on the Charles. The excellent conditioning gained from practice should definitely make the squad much smoother and stronger for the upcoming spring races.

In the past, the Purple has usually been forced to settle for second place behind Tech; however, Coach Vara expects things to be a little different this year. The reason for his high hopes is the return of such veteran rowers as Azzone, Baird, Brennan, Gottwald, Jordan, Stevens, and Zunder, along with coxswain Dolan. These boys, plus a fine group of new scullers should indeed furnish an excellent squad.

We sincerely wish Coach Vara the greatest success this spring and we extend our gratitude for the time and patience he has devoted to crew.

Veteran Starters Seek City Crown

With the return of six of last year's starters, Latin is eagerly looking forward to gaining the City Championship once again. Strengthened by some very promising newcomers, the veteran performers Garvin, Howland, Hardy, Rosenthal, Powers, Bradley, and Buckley indeed have the makings of an excellent team.

Coach Thomas is certainly to be congratulated for the time and effort he has devoted to the golf program. We are confident that he and his squad will have continued success in the future.

THE STAFF OF THE 1966

With the completion of the greatest literary masterpiece of the century, very little remains to be said by or about the LIBER ACTORUM staff.

Having received full cooperation from everyone involved, we maintained a hectic pace throughout the year. We really could have finished by January, but it's more fun to work under pressure, right? Right!

The staff's deepest thanks are extended to our literary advisor Mr. Leo Casey, who devoted much of his time, effort, and patience to produce this year book. The invaluable assistance of our business advisor, Mr. Perry Jameson, and the colorful imagination of Mr. John Gearin are greatly appreciated. We also wish to thank all who suggested that the book be read by all the Supreme Court Justices. (That was a compliment, wasn't it?)

This year, the Register has continued in the tradition of literary excellence and school service which have been its guiding principles since its founding by philosopher George Santayana in 1881.

An editorial in its first issue explained its purpose:

In presenting the Register to the Boston Latin School, a few words concerning our design in its publication are necessary. It is our intention to edit a paper that will bring the boys into closer relationship, and make them realize that they are the common children of the oldest, grandest, and most renowned school in the world. As the name of our journal implies, we intend to keep a register of all the events which we think will interest those who are, or have been, connected with the school.

Hard Work and Festeric

"You are a traitor and a faithless knave."

"Pray God we may make haste, and come too late."

The performance of this year's school play, a presentation of Shakespeare's "Richard II" would have gained the admiration and acclaim of Willy himself, were he there. The hard work and patience of director-producer Mr. Conrad Jameson and the many hours of rehearsal were well rewarded with the success of the production on May 11 and 12.

Some very fine and festeric performances were turned out by: Richard Curtis, as the King, "basely led by flatterers"; Mark Harris, as "Can sick men play so nicely with their names?"

The decision to aid Bolingbroke.

"Vex not yourself nor strive not with your breath..."

Performances...

"The ripest fruit falls first, and so does he . . ."

Bolingbroke, the "banished 'traitor'"; Steven Landrigan, as "time-honored" Gaunt; and Paul Schlossberg, as the shrewd Duke of York.

The members of the cast would like to extend their sincere appreciation to Mr. Jameson. As expert producer, director, coach, (and often-times writer, too!), Mr. Jameson each year refuses to accept any credit for the success of the school play. The cast of "Richard II" now wishes to give him the commendation which he so richly deserves.

"Your presence makes us rich, most noble lord."

"How he did seem to dive into their hearts..."

Director-producer Mr. Conrad Jameson.

"We thank you both; yet one but flatters us."

BOWLING I

In spite of the absence of the president of the club at all meetings, this year's Class I Bowling Club succeeded in providing pleasant exercise to the seniors, an outlet for the members' competitive motivations, and ruination to the Boyalston Bowladrome. In addition to the usual bowling matches, the club also participated in such contests as "Break the Gate", "Extra Box," and "Filch the Ball." In the less exciting regular play, however, room honors went to 118 while Darryl Leitsinger attained the individual high.

BOWLING II

This past year brought many innovations in the Class II Bowling Club. Foremost among these was the first annual All-Star game, pitting the top six bowlers of Class I against six stars of Class II. Thanks to some outstanding bowling by Jack "Meatball" Scala, however, The Seniors emerged victorious.

In addition to the All-Star game, new methods of score-keeping were also introduced. To this point individual honors were achieved by Bill Mayo and Ken O'Connell, while team honors went to Room 119. We all wish to thank Mr. Powers for his assistance.

CHESS CLUB AND TEAM

During the past year the Chess Club successfully attained its goal of stimulating interest in that age-old game of skill and of forming a Chess Team worthy of representing the Latin School. In pursuance of these objectives, the club conducted a tournament open to all Latin School boys not members of the Chess Team, and awarded prizes to the top four contestants.

Despite the loss of six players from last year's team, the Chess Team again captured the GBI League championship.

HIGHWAY SAFETY CLUB

This year, the Highway Safety Club, under Mr. Spracklin's direction, embarked upon a crash program of promoting among its members a more thorough knowledge of highway safety and road courtesy. This was accomplished through lectures, intracub discussions, and films as well as other types of visual aids. Among the speakers who came before the club included a Registry officer, discussing the many aspects of safety on the roads.

As the year drew to a close, members speeded to the streets to put to practice what had been so faithfully learned.

DECLAMATION

During the past year Latin School's auditorium again resounded with eloquently-delivered orations, as declaimers carried on the school's oldest and most prized tradition. Fresh talent from all classes joined the "seasoned veterans" in delivering selections ranging from Poe's "The Raven" to Benchley's "Treasurer's Report".

A unique innovation was incorporated this year as, for the first time in the history of the school, two declaimers appeared simultaneously on stage to deliver their oration.

In April, Prize Declamation was held, in which those boys who had competed in at least three previous declamations were eligible. The winners of this competition as well as the individual class winners were awarded special prizes.

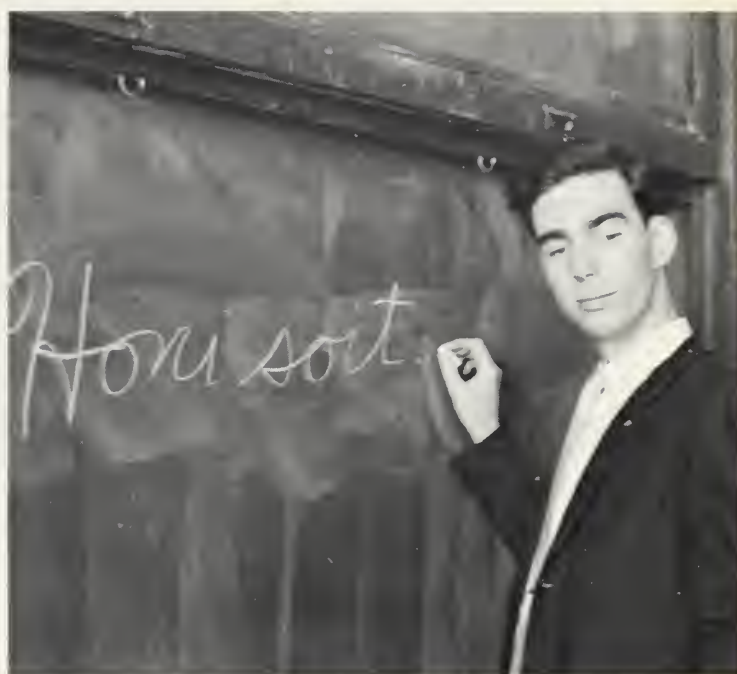

"Oh what an ass am I . . ."

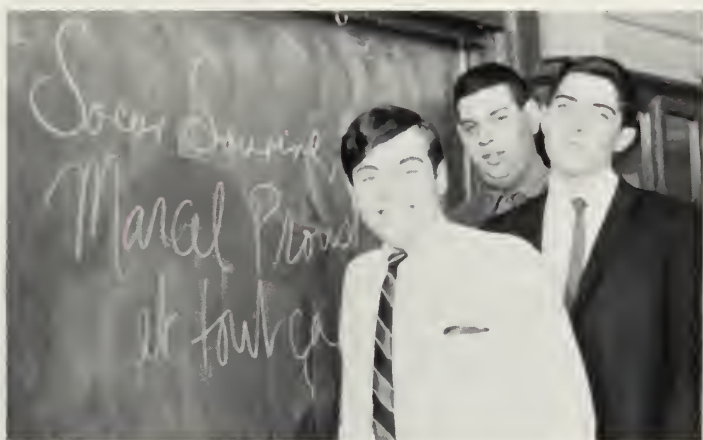

"... full of sound and fury, signifying nothing."

FRENCH CLUB

Seeking to supplement the French course offered at Latin School, the French Club presented an outstandingly varied program. A guided tour of French Impressionist paintings at the Museum of Fine Arts, guest speakers, films, and informal discussions comprised the year's activities. During meetings members had the opportunity to speak conversational French and listen to records and tapes. Thus, the club's membership achieved a greater proficiency in communicating the language and acquired a better understanding of France, its customs, and its people. We must commend Mr. Dio Dato for his time and effort.

GOLF CLUB

A rapidly swelling membership made for a swinging time in this year's Golf Club. The club did not merely putter around with a cursory examination of the game, but learned the fine points of golfing through training films, educational lectures, and through suggestions and individual instruction given by Mr. Thomas. Also, many young golfers were given the opportunity to engage in intramural competition on the two public golf links of Boston. We wish to thank Mr. Thomas whose enthusiasm and patience made this a successful year.

GLEE CLUB

The Boston Latin School Glee Club, under the expert direction of Mr. Michael Famiglietti, has once again had a varied and prosperous season. The Club sang traditional Christmas carols on The Boston Common and at the school Christmas assembly. It also gave several other well-received concerts, the most notable at the annual Spring Music Festival. In addition, individual members performed at the Thanksgiving Day Assembly and at numerous other occasions throughout the year.

The Glee Club wishes to express its sincere thanks to Mr. Famiglietti, whose professional guidance made this year so successful.

LIBRARY STAFF

Sacrificing their study periods, the members of the Library Staff have contributed their time to assume the many necessary tasks of the library. Included in their duties were stamping books, filing cards, and helping catalogue the many new books purchased for the school. The staff also helped organize the new advanced placement sections, where students wishing to supplement their studies can find books on advanced topics.

Although the death of our beloved librarian, Miss Sandbar, forced the library to close, the staff will be ready to perform its needed services when it re-opens.

Fulfilling its goal of threefold service — to the school, community, and individual, this year's Key Club completed many worthwhile and rewarding projects.

Members volunteered over three thousand hours at various hospitals and organizations. Through the co-sponsorship of the Music Festival ad-book and the operation of the bookstore, the club was able to raise several thousand dollars in scholarship money. Among other club activities were holding a Christmas party for patients at the Children's Hospital and helping out at the several houses of the Roxbury Federation of Neighborhood Centers during school vacations.

Many fine speakers, including college professors and members of the Mass. General Court, addressed the club this year, thereby helping the vocational guidance program.

The club would like to thank Mr. Waldron for the great amount of time he devoted and the excellent guidance he rendered in his first year as advisor.

Inquisitiveness and the desire to learn beyond the classroom characterized this year's Math X Club. Specifically, members worked on outside projects and delivered both informative and entertaining lectures on such diverse topics as transfinite numbers and computer programming.

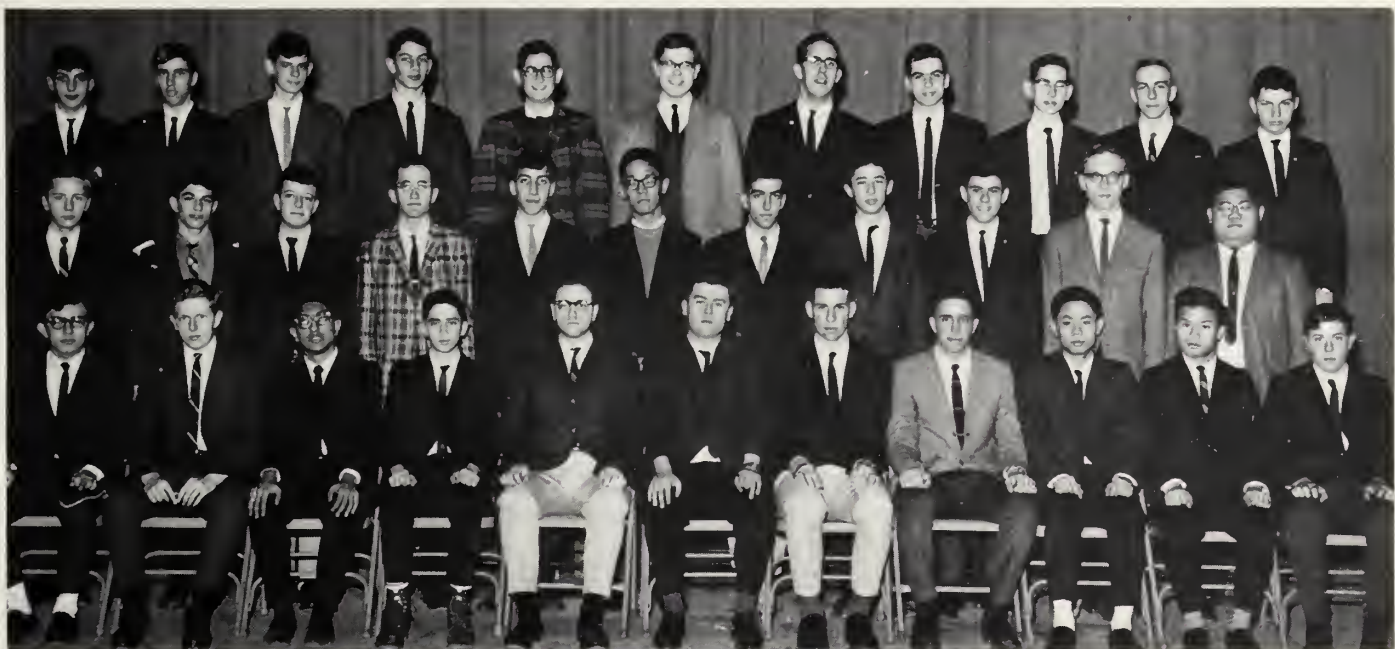

Under the direction of Mr. Devaney, the club introduced several innovations. The most outstanding of these was the establishment of a junior club for boys of classes VI-IV. This addition promises to be most helpful in providing us with a continuous source of new members.

The objective of the Model Railroad Club is to present to its members useful advice on the construction and operation of a model layout. Having completed last year's "O" layout, the club decided this year to construct an "HO" unit. After officers had drawn up blueprints, this painstaking, but rewarding, project was finally completed at the end of the school year. Other club accomplishments included writing a new constitution, acquiring a great number of railroad magazines, and setting up an entirely new schedule.

The Music Appreciation Club has again achieved its objective of instilling in its members a greater enjoyment of music. During each meeting, held either at Mr. Roche's dicotheque or at one of the members' homes, the club listened to platters, ranging from jazz to dirges. Following the playing of each record and the ensuing neighbors' complaints in the form of small boulders hurled through the windows, the members discussed the many aspects of the music.

The club wishes to thank Mr. Roche for the use of his "home" and the many panes he has spared.

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

This year, Latin School's eighty-seven members fulfilled to the highest degree the National Honor Society's motto of "scholarship, leadership, character, and service."

The Society raised scholarship money by selling ads for the Music Festival Ad Book, in addition to continuing its tutoring program. At the Annual Conference of Eastern Mass. NHS Chapters, Latin School was ably represented by its six delegates.

All the members of this year's National Honor Society gratefully acknowledge the assistance of Mr. Johnson, who, in his first year, capably fulfilled the difficult role of faculty advisor.

PHILOSOPHY CLUB

The second year of the Philosophy Club has indeed been highly successful. Meetings were highlighted by speakers on various phases of world philosophy, such as George Sukhu's informative talk on "Zen Buddhism" and Mr. Lindahl's excellent presentation of "The Philosophy of Kier Kegaard as compared with that of Nietzsche." Above all, the club provided an opportunity for students not only to learn about the ideas of the great philosophers, but also to express their own philosophical beliefs.

Much thanks is to be given Mr. Donovan, our club advisor, for his ceaseless efforts and helpful advice.

Future plans call for the Council's initiating a system for the chartering of all Latin School Clubs. It is hoped that in the future this body will have an even greater voice in school affairs.

Maintenance of stage and assembly facilities is the responsibility of the stage crew. In addition to preparing the stage and hall for BLS assemblies, plays and Awards Night, the stage crew makes preparations for a number of outside activities. Prominent among these are forums presented by various colleges and the annual Girl's Latin Fashion Show.

A major task of the stage crew is setting the stage for the class play. Under the supervision of our advisor Mr. Casey and director and producer Mr. Jameson, this year's presentation of "Richard II" was a huge success.

WEIGHTLIFTING CLUB

By virtue of the extensive muscle building program of the Weightlifting Club, we dare say no member of this club will have sand kicked in his face this summer. CLASS DAY COMMITTEE

Brilliant satires and caricatures were the order of the day as the class of 1966 celebrated class day. Seniors frolicked about dimly.

The Last Will and Testament of the class was met with mixed emotions, dependent upon the nature of bequests to various seniors. The more serious side of class day came with the readings of the class poem and class oration.

With bloodshot eyes, 254 of America's brightest young men howled their approval of their fellows' performances.

VICTORY DANCE

This year's Victory Dance was just as successful as "The Game" (24 - 12). Held at the New England Life Hall and with the music being supplied by Jimmy McHale and his orchestra, the dance was a fitting climax to the Turkey victory.

Thanks to the careful planning of the committee, this year's Victory Dance was undoubtedly one of the most delightful in recent years.

MID-WINTER DANCE

This year's Mid-Winter Dance, held at the Charter House Motel, brought both a change of scenery and a welcome change of pace. Replacing last year's "aphrodisiacal" music of Dave Lawrence and his orchestra," was the swinging A-Go-Go beat of the Sandelles — a dual-talented group which also provided softer music for the less adept. After an evening of delightful entertainment and "warm" companionship, the more adventurous party-goers retired to the livelier nightspots where the merriment continued to an ungodly hour.

FAREWELL PROM

The Blue Hills Country Club provided a scenic setting for the annual Farewell Prom. The smartly tuxedoed Men of the Latin School and their beautifully gowned dates, enchanted by the melodious tunes of the orchestra, truly enjoyed a memorable evening.

After the judges chose the Queen of the Prom, the festivities drew to a close, as the newly crowned Queen and her escort led the traditional Grand March.

Congratulations go to this year's committee for making the prom a notable success.
